HEBREW SECTION

The economy and the joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation dominated the sections' attention during the month. The month began with a marathon session Cabinet session to approve an emergency economic plan the main points of which call for $750 million cut in government activities, an 18.8% devaluation, a 3% cut in public sector wages but with 3% less compensation for wage erosion than that given other workers in the economy, a general price increase of 17 percent, with many prices going up as much as 30%, and additional advance tax payment by the self-employed. Following these measures, wages and prices, as well as the currency exchange rate, were to be frozen for 3 months. The package was met by a series of strikes forcing the government, after several marathon sessions involving Prime Minister Peres, Finance Minister Moda'i and Histadrut Secretary General Qevsar, to retreat to a 14% increment for private and public sector employees in their next paycheck, a 12% increase for both sectors on 1 September and compensation to be paid whenever the cost of living index exceeds 4% a month. In exchange, the government called for a 6% cut in public sector employment. Implementation of this cut is still under discussion.

The subject of terrorism was covered extensively throughout the month, beginning with the conviction and sentencing of the Jewish underground terrorists, and the pressures to obtain an amnesty for them. The month ended with consideration being given to tougher measures to handle increasing acts of terrorism in the territories.

The subject of the composition of a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, whether talks should be held with it, who it should talk to it and what should be discussed with it took on new urgency with the report that a list of names compiled by the PLO had been submitted to the United States. By the end of the month there were still no definitive answers to any of these questions.

The Turkish section followed the annual "Peace and Freedom" day celebrations and the approval of a new coalition government in northern Cyprus.

In Turkey there were reports of a growing number of "separatists" killed or captured.

The focus of attention this month in the new office turned to contract matters when the construction company notified us that the building will not be completed by 1 August. the occupancy date set under the contract. Numerous meetings with lawyers and all sides failed to produce a satisfactory settlement of the problem by month's end. Meanwhile work continued. highlighted by the completion of the microwave room on the embassy roof. the closing of the ceiling. installation of the interior HVAC air handler. and the delivery of the modular monitoring units. All equipment and furniture to complete the move are in country. with installation only awaiting the finishing interior work. The arrival of headquarters technician [redacted] on TDY has accelerated the technical preparations.
